There are free and secret voting to be settled by the ballot-box: the equalisation of constituencies, involving a redistribution of seats; as every manand perhaps every woman-at least unmarried women, maintaining themselves by their property or business, and paying taxes—will vote at elections, it would be inconsistent not to let every one be also voted for and returned to Parliament; and as noor people cannot live upon nothing, memhers will of course have to be paid. Then, again, otherwise they will not be received, and all person seven years, or even three of the monopoly of indebted to said Estate are hereby required today power and pay, would of course be too great an the amount of their debts to the undersigned abuse to be telerated, so that there is nothing for without delay. it but to introduce annual Parliaments. These other five points of the Charter are so many more rolges of Alps, and by the time they were all surmounted and passed, the occumation the extreme reformer would be gone—and, it to be feared, a great many other things which must people consider of value, with, it. One of our contemporaries, in his yearly summary informs us that Davis, and Lee, and Jackson, the heroes of the Contederate war of independence, are already forgotten by their own cou drymen and by Englishmen. If this be so, fam ein even a more frugile and evanescent thing then it has been said to be. It is only success we are told, that ream the laurels, the inc. itable down of those who fail is to rot in oblivion. And vet, perhaps, it would not be difficult to find some i who would stoner have died with Jackson than lived with flooker, who would rather have falle: with Lee than have conquered with Grant, self denying patriotism, a devotion to a losing course, a perseverance in a contest in which all the world is against him, are qualities, which wil warn a man applause even in a world in which the majority are ever ready to give their suffrage to the winner. If the cause Poland was able to rouse such an enthusiasm r Kosciusko was almost deified by the men of his day, if princes shed tears for him, and mosts chanted dirges over his grave there enough of chivalry left among us to inspire ies with pity and sympathy for the heroes of a grander and more nobly contested struggle-a buttle of the Titans; in which the power of a giant. was confronted with a giant's endurance. Europe might well have mourned and "freedom shrieked" at the death of dackson as much as at the full of Kosciusko. Like Epniniuondas a Mantinen. like Wolfe at Quebec, like Moore i Cornona, like Nelson at Trafalgar, like Haveleel ofter his nine battles, "Storewall" Jackson died in the arms of victory.
